Scope and Content Notes

The Geographic File is an artificial collection created over the course of many years in the Department of Prints, Photographs, and Architectural Collections. Small donations of prints or photographs of views of geographic locations have been filed here. The collection contains, in addition to prints and photographs, some newspaper clippings, some reproductions of paintings and other items in the N-YHS Museum collection, and some ephemera. The collection is divided into four series: Foreign Views; American Views; New York City Views (Manhattan); and New York City Views (Other Boroughs).

Within each series, material is separately housed by size. Boxes hold material smaller than approximately 12 x 14 inches. Larger material is housed flat in folders in drawers. Oversize material is generally larger than 30 x 40 inches. Boxed material is described to the folder level. Some larger material has been described to the item level. Oversize material is all described to the item level, to facilitate use and reduce unnecessary handling. See individual series descriptions for more cataloging information.

Series I. Foreign Views is arranged alphabetically by country. Current (as of 2006), and not contemporaneous, names of countries were used. Each country for which there is a view is listed. In the boxed views, if five or more views of a city within a country exist, that city received its own folder.

Series II. American Views is arranged alphabetically by state. Within states, views of cities are also arranged alphabetically. In the boxed views, if five or more views of a city exist, that city received its own folder. Within each city, additional folders were also created for buildings, etc. with five or more views.

Series III. New York City Views (Manhattan) is arranged in an organizational structure by topic of the view.

GENERAL views include aerial views (those taken from airplanes or from the top of a tall building) and birds-eye views (generally 19th-century prints). Aerial views of lower Manhattan include views of the World Trade Center. Aerial views of midtown include views of the Empire State Building and the Chrysler Building. Aerial views of uptown include images of Central Park, Grant's Tomb, Riverside Drive and Riverside Park. Harbor views are those which show the shore and skyline of Manhattan from the water, or from across some body of water. Some river and harbor views that show more than one borough are filed here. If the view is mainly of another borough, it will be filed therein. For views of the Manhattan harbors and piers from within the city, look under Rivers and Piers. RIVERS, ISLANDS, and BRIDGES are arranged alphabetically. All bridges that connect the 5 boroughs are filed here. Bridges within another borough should be found in Series IV. Most buildings on islands (for example, asylums on Roosevelt Island) are filed under general Buildings headings. It behooves researchers to look under both headings to be sure of complete coverage.

STREET SCENES are views along streets and avenues. Some show a small portion of one block, some show several blocks. For views that specifically spotlight one building, search under BUILDINGS. However, researchers should also search the street scenes for other images of a specific building, especially those which may also show surrounding buildings and street and sidewalk traffic. Street scenes are arranged alphabetically or numerically. A few named squares have their own folder (i.e. Herald Square and Times Square). For more Times Square images, see Night Views in GENERAL views. Researchers interested in those areas should also consult surrounding streets, such as Broadway, the avenues, and the appropriate cross streets.

PARKS and GARDENS include images of parks and gardens, some now defunct, throughout Manhattan. A few gardens run as commercial enterprises, such as Elgin's Botanic Garden can be found here.

BUILDINGS are prints or photographs that spotlight a specific building. Churches are filed alphabetically by name following the organization provided in David Dunlap's encyclopedic work From Abyssinian to Zion, which is available for reference. Government buildings include police and fire stations. Residences are filed alphabetically by the last name of the owner, or by their own name, if applicable. Cross-references have been provided in those cases. Named apartment complexes are filed in alphabetically with residences, and unnamed apartment buildings can be found at the end of the run.

TRANSPORTATION includes images of all sorts of transportation found within the boundaries of New York City. For more general transportation (i.e. generic railroad images), look in the Subject File (PR 068). This category mainly includes images of buses, carriages, elevated railroads and subway images. Images of shipping boats can sometimes be found in Harbor Views, and also in the Maritime History File (PR 100).

EVENTS include views of special events, such as parades, funeral processions, celebrations, and xxx. Researchers looking for parade images should also check street scenes for those streets that are often parade routes, such as Broadway and Fifth Avenue. For example, the Madison Square folder contains panoramic views that show banners for the Pan-Am Exposition.

Material housed in boxes includes many photos by Beecher Ogden, and also a great many images (most copy photographs) collected, and donated, by George Bagoie.

Material housed flat has been separated into two categories based on format: Prints and Photographs. Within each format, material has been arranged into the above categories. Each image filed under the Buildings categories is separately listed in the finding aid below. In other categories, attempts have been made to provide more specific information about images in each folder, to reduce browsing and encourage more specific use.

Series IV. New York City Views (Other Boroughs) follows the same general organizational structure as Series III. For bridges and some general harbor views, see Series III.

Related Materials in the Department of Prints, Photographs, and Architectural Collections

Additional printed views of New York City can be found in the Boyd Collection (PR 007) and in Fine Art Prints of New York City (PR 229) Additional photographs can be found throughout the photographic collections of the Department. All bound volumes of New York City and other views are catalogued in the Library's catalog, BOBCAT. More general (not specific to NYC or a specific geographical location) images of firefighters, transportation, and occupations can be found in the Subject File (PR 068).

BUILDINGS

Buildings are arranged by type. With the exceptions of churches (see below), buildings with 5 or more views were given their own folder. Look in "general" or "miscellaneous" folders for other buildings. If a building was used for more than one purpose (more often the case in government buildings), it is filed under the name or use it was most widely known as, and cross-references have been provided where appropriate.

CHURCHES AND SYNAGOGUES

Churches are filed alphabetically by their names. Names beginning with "Church of" are filed under the rest of the name. Names beginning with numbers, such as "First Reformed Dutch Church," are filed alphabetically; in this case, under "F." In general naming and filing follows the format in From Abyssinian to Zion (New York: Columbia University Press, 2004), David W. Dunlap's atlas of Manhattan churches. Generally, churches with more than one view are filed into their own folders.
